

I have Sonic.net as my DSL ISP, and I love them!
After years of struggling with SBC's DSL service and customer service, I switched to Sonic.net and have never been happier!
Their service is faster, easier, and more user-friendly than SBC's ever was, and their customer service is fantastic.
I would really hate to have to switch back to SBC or any of the big companies because the FCC stopped regulating broadband companies!
I love my independent, local ISP provider, the services they provide, and the ways in which they provide them.
Deregulation would mean smaller, independent ISP providers would be forced out of business, and this would be awful for consumers - it would be like allowing the big companies, such as BellSouth, SBC, Verizon, etc., to have a monopoly on the market - with service that PALES in comparison to the smaller, independent ISPs!
